

General Site Questions: Why is there so little information in this FAQ?

When taking on the redesign of BSJ.com, we thought long and hard about a suitable approach to keeping the layout simple and powerful. What we came up with, we hope, is a reflection of the values of BSJ.com: free access, and features built directly on the needs of the theater professionals that use the site.

Do we know all your needs? Of course not. That's why we're in beta. We want your input, and we'd like to build features that are easy for everyone to use and powerful enough for people who use the site all the time. As in theater, the best results come from a collaborative process.

Likewise, this FAQ will be made up of just that: YOUR Frequently Asked Questions, not just the stuff we think you need to know. The web is populated with a lot of apps built for coders, because that's what is easy to program. We're hoping (and boy oh boy are we not there yet, thanks for your patience) that through the process of your feedback, we'll continue to tweak the site to really make it useful and simple for everyone to use.

So ask away! Your feedback and even confusion is greatly appreciated, and will help to improve BackstageJobs.com for the future!

Unique solution ID: #1002

Author: Nick Keenan

Last update: 2007-02-07 14:13